Indian Telegraphy.

It is wonderful to what a state of perfection the Indian has carried this simple mode of telegraphing. Scattered over a great portion of the plains, from British America proved platform scales, in the north almost to the Mexican border on the south, are to be found isolated hills. or, as they are usually termed, "buttes," which can be seen a distance of from twenty to more than fifty miles. These peaks are selected as the telegraphic stations. By varying the number of the columns of smoke different meanings are conveyed by the messages. The most simple is well as most easily varied mode, and resembling somewhat the ordinary alphabet employed in the magnetic telegraph, is arranged by and would prefer rather to have the autobuilding a small fire which is not allowed to graph of some milk-and-water poet than blaze; then, by placing an armfull of partially green grass or weeds over the fire, as note. if to smother it, a dense white smoke is created, which ordinarly will ascend in a old maid; she gets morried generally to a continuous vertical column for hundreds of man who has but little education, and he feet. As soon as the lookout near the village discerns the approach in the distance of the expected war party, the intelligence is at once published to the occupants of the village through the stentorian tones of the vilusually performed by some superannuated or deposed chief. Runners mounted upon fleet ponies are at once despatched to meet the returning warriors and gather the particulars of the expedition-whether successful or otherwise; whether they are returning laden with scalps and plunder or come empty handed. They advance towards the village painted and dressed in full war costume, singing their war songs, discharging their firearms, and uttering ever and anon the war whoop peculiar to their tribe. Added to this, every soul in the village capable of uttering sound joins in the general rejoicing, and for a time the entire population is wild with excitement. If, however, instead of returning in triumph, the war party has met with disaster and suffered the loss of one or more warriors, the scene witnessed upon their arrival at the village is as boisterous as the other, but even more horrible. The party is met as before by all the inhabitants of the village, but in a widely different manner; instead of the shouts and songs of victory which greet the successful warriors, only the streaming tears and wails of an afflicted people are to be heard .- | Custer's "Life on the Plains."

Recently a gentleman from Rochester was driving about Niagara Falls, and while on Goat Island, nearly opposite the place where the painter fell off from the bridge last Summer, he noticed that large rocks in the bed of the river were entirely dry between the the bridge and the first of the Sister Islands, where the water usually rushes on two feet in depth. The Rochesterian proposed to walk across to the island, but the driver objected and than decided to try the feat himself, which he did without wetting the soles of his boots. This was never accomplished before, and two days afterwards several feet of hurrying waters covered the spot. It is supposed that a strong northeast wind which had prevailed for several days, set the waters back-forced them up the lake.

Short Postponement of the Fifth Gift

As manager of the gift concerts given in aid of the rublic Library of Kentu-ky, my position creates an imontant trust in behalf of the Public Library and the chet-holders of the fifth gift concert. The Public Li rary of Kentucky and the ticket-holders are jointly the fund to be distributed in gifts, the greater will be the gift awarded to each lucky ticket holder and the nore the amount realized by the Library. To have a full drawing is so manifestly to the interest of those interested, that, rather than have a fractional drawing on the 30th inst., I deem it due to the trust confided to me by the ticket-holders and the Public Library of Kenncky, that a short postponement be made to enable me lage crier, the duties of which office are to dispose of the unsold tickets and have a full drawing. hough the very large amount now in bank would enable us to distribute handsome gifts, yet we should feel disiled to make a fractional drawing, however large. We have received so very large a number of letters from all parts of the country from those most largely interested, urging a postponement if all the tickets be not sold by the 30th, that we feel strengthened in our sense of duty to the ticket-holders and the Public Library, to mage the postponement. Under the circumstances, we have determined, in the interest of all part)es. to postpone the concert and drawing to Saturday, ebruary 27, 1875, at which time the drawing will positively take place; and, as a guarantee of good faith oward ticket-holders, we pledge ourselves to refund to any ticket-holder his money, upon presentation of his ticket, should the drawing fail to come off at the day now fixed.
